

JOBSHADOWING

Gas station attendant

Vocation

A gas station worker's vocation is rooted in service, efficiency, and responsibility. They ensure customers receive fuel and essential products while maintaining safety standards and a welcoming environment. Their role requires attention to detail, problem-solving skills, and a customer-focused attitude.

Salary	Training
It is available through an agreement with the collective bargaining	● Basic Education: A high school diploma or equivalent is often preferred. ● Customer Service Skills: Experience in retail or customer service can be an advantage. ● Safety Training: Knowledge of handling hazardous materials, fire safety, and first aid may be required. ● Cash Handling: Familiarity with operating cash registers and handling transactions is useful. ● Licenses and Certifications: In some locations, specific certifications related to fuel handling.

Responsibilities

Store security to take care of thieves, safety of customers and employees due to the dangers of gas management and store replenishment, customer service being these of the most important of the job.

Promotion

From salesperson to manager

Overtime work

The collective bargaining agreement establishes that these hours must be paid at a surcharge of 75% over the normal working hour.

Shifts

The collective bargaining agreement establishes a 40-hour workweek, divided into day, afternoon and evening.

